Chapter 1 by 🐱Alahna🐱

Once upon a time there was a beautiful girl with long blond hair and hazel eyes. She had a good life, with enough friends and even a boyfriend she thought would last her a lifetime. Fifth grade passed by and her laugh rang through the air as she whispered and giggled to her friends everyday at school. The playground was her home, the place she liked to be the most. The summer before sixth grade was what ruined her. Her boyfriend broke her heart, and even when she gave him a second chance, he broke her heart again. She tried to keep herself happy, tell herself everything okay. But the truth was she was hurting inside, and it was just starting to show when sixth grade started. She had less friends, the ones she had had in fifth grade decided that she wasn't worth their time anymore. But one of her friends stuck to her, encouraged her through the year. But the girl needed much more. So she cut off twelve inches of her beautiful long golden hair, trying to change herself in anyway she could in hope that others will would take notice and want to be her friend. But it did the opposite. Slowly she lost more friends, less people wanted to hang out with her. She slowly changed, became a stranger to her self, not sure who she was or who she was going to be. That girl, the one who is now in seventh grade, that would be me. I'm the one who is uncertain about who she is. I think I know a little more about myself than I used to, but still I'm full of uncertainty.

Chapter 2 by SaintSayaka

There was only one thing that stayed constant through the mess. One thing that I came to count on.

I wanted my hair to become shorter and shorter until there was nothing there

I made changes to myself. I abandoned my lip smackers and dolls, I stuck to a plainer wardrobe now

I think I always knew why
